

All the fun of the fair

Showmen or Fairground families are a group that are known as 'occupational Travellers' who earn their living running funfairs. These families are included under the umbrella term 'Traveller'.

The children are able to attend their base school when the family are not on the road, usually during the winter months. Reflecting the culture in school is a good way to learn about different lifestyles and to celebrate diversity.

Lego is one way to build your own funfair. You don't have to have a specific kit just a selection of bricks and lots of imagination! Why not get creative and find other ways to make your own fairground rides?
